

Call for Papers

In collaboration with the organising committee of the 4th International Conference “Economic Philosophy” in Lyon, the Erasmus Journal for Philosophy and Economics (EJPE) would like to invite young scholars to submit a paper of their presentation for publication. A selection of the papers submitted will be published in a special issue of the journal. Here are the submission guidelines:

1. You need to be a young scholar, i.e. to be a graduate student or to have obtained your PhD in 2017 or 2018. If the paper is co-authored, one young scholar has to be the first author or have provided equal contribution.
2. The deadline for submitting papers is the 28th of September 2018.
3. Submissions must be based on your conference presentation and written in English.
4. Papers should have a maximum of 8,000 words. See the instructions for authors on our website.
5. Papers should be submitted through EJPE's website.
6. Submissions will be evaluated following the journal's usual standards and procedures. EJPE reserves final say with respect to acceptability for publication.
7. All single-authored accepted papers will be automatically considered for the Mark Blaug Prize in Philosophy and Economics. Accepted co-authored papers where all authors are young scholars will also be considered for the prize.

EJPE is a peer-reviewed bi-annual academic journal supported by the Erasmus Institute for Philosophy and Economics at the Philosophy Faculty of Erasmus University Rotterdam. EJPE publishes research on the methodology, history, ethics, and interdisciplinary relations of economics. EJPE is an Open Access Journal: all the content is permanently available online without subscription or payment.
